I am proud to present the Concordia Library 2017-18 annual report. 2018 was an important year for the library. We celebrated the grand reopening of the Webster Library after a $37-million cutting-edge and technology-rich transformation. The library features 22 types of study spaces and forward-looking 21st-century facilities for individual, active and collaborative learning. The Webster Library now combines the fundamentals of a university library and a deep dive into rich and diverse digital environments. It’s at once inviting, warm and filled with natural light — a place where students can take charge of their own learning.

In 2017, I had the honour of being appointed Concordia’s first vice-provost of Digital Strategy, in addition to continuing in my role as university librarian. In my new role, I will work in collaboration with a large cross-section of Concordians to develop the vision and roadmap for Concordia’s digital strategy as a next-generation university. My goal is to help provide all current and future students with the tools they need to maximize their success in our digital culture and economy.

In addition to these highlights, the annual report provides you with an overview of some of the outstanding projects realized by Library team members for the Concordia community.

I invite you to read the 2017-18 annual report to learn more about some of our recent exciting activities and accomplishments.

With my best wishes,

Guyline Beaudry, PhD
Vice-Provost of Digital Strategy and University Librarian

The transformation of the Webster Library, which sees over two million visitors per year, was made possible by the collaborative efforts of many partners. It began with the Library Space Master Plan in 2011 with architect Manon Asselin and JLP Architectes. This was followed by the preparation of the program by Audrey Archambault, Marco Goyette, Francis Huneault, Yves Dagenais, and Jean-Pierre LeTourneux from MSD Architectes. The acoustic engineers of Bouthillette Parizeau and Davidson & Associates also contributed significantly to the space design. GSM Project provided support for the technology program. The renovations were undertaken by the award-winning construction firm Pomerleau. On the Concordia side, numerous individuals from Facilities Management and the Library contributed to the successful delivery of this project.
A survey was conducted on January 31, 2018 for a 24-hour period in order to capture information about Concordia Library users. During that time, the Library asked everyone entering one of the Library’s three spaces (Webster, Vanier, and Grey Nuns Reading and Group Study Rooms) to tell us their status, their faculty, if applicable, and their reasons for coming to the library that day. This short survey provided us with a snapshot of Concordia Library users and their use of spaces, collections, and resources. A total of 5,542 surveys were completed for an overall response rate of 51%. Almost 92% of survey respondents were students from Concordia University, 78.51% undergraduate and 13.38% graduate students. The majority of student respondents were affiliated with the Faculty of Arts and Science. Almost half of respondents reported coming to the Library to study or get work done by themselves.

In February 2018 we launched our new Library Research Skills Tutorial. With eight modules, which include activities and quizzes, we hope the tutorial will be used in a variety of ways. Students can access the tutorial whenever they need it, working through selected modules or the whole tutorial, faculty may assign or recommend modules that are particularly relevant to an assignment; and librarians may use parts of the tutorial for active learning approaches in their research skills workshops or during one-on-one interactions.

On November 23, 2017, the Library launched its speaker series with a talk on the National Heritage Digitization Strategy by the librarian and archivist of Canada, Dr. Guy Berthiaume. The presentation, which was held in the Webster Seminar Room, was attended by librarians from Concordia and elsewhere, as well as interested faculty.

In the 2017-18 year, a campaign to promote the new Library Code of Conduct was launched. The #LibEtiquette campaign was created with the intention of maintaining safe and comfortable spaces for students to study and work as a result of the Webster Transformation. Throughout the campaign, the Library reinforced the importance of a proper Library environment and discouraged behaviours that are considered disruptive to others. The campaign applies to all areas of the Library, including stack areas, study spaces, classrooms, group study rooms, meeting rooms, stairwells, and snacking areas. The campaign has been successful so far, and it extended to both the Vanier Library and Grey Nuns Reading Room.

EXHIBITIONS

Since January, Webster Library has had its own elegant built-in exhibition display located close to the Question? Ask Us! desk. It is 14 inches deep, seven feet tall, and features art and unique objects. Large glare-free glass doors protect the content of the display area, which is equipped with a rail system to hang frames, adjustable tablets as well as special lighting to accommodate each exhibition. The first exhibition in the new display area, Remembering Expo 67, ran from mid-January to mid-March 2018. Below is a description of the exhibitions at the Webster Library.

Remembering Expo 67
January 4 – March 12, 2018
Curators Johnanne Sloan, professor in the Art History Department, Nick Cabelli and Kate Nagy, Concordia art history students
Others Objects on loan from Bruno Paul Stenson (Extensive Expo 67 private collection of textual items and objects)
Vernissage January 25, 2018
Curated by art history professor Johnanne Sloan, Remembering Expo 67 was comprised of unique documents, photographs, and artifacts that explore the enduring significance of Montréal’s 1967 world’s fair. Most of the items on display in this exhibition derived from the extraordinary Expo 67 collection amassed by Bruno Paul Stenson over the years. Stenson holds a Master of History from Concordia University and has long recognized the cultural and scholarly value of Expo 67.

From the Archives to the Everyday: Caribbean Visualities and Meanings
February 1 – 28, 2018
Curators Christiana Abraham, assistant professor in the Department of Communication Studies
Others Centre International de Documentation et d’Information Haïtienne, Caribéenne et Afro-canadienne (CIDHCA) and the Concordia Caribbean Student Union (CCSU)
Within the context of Black History Month, the Webster Library was pleased to present an exhibition of archival photographs and contemporary texts exploring the rich and diverse visualities of the Caribbean region. The photographs themselves, selected by the Centre International de Documentation et d’Information Haïtienne, Caribéenne et Afro-canadienne (CIDHCA) and Christiana Abraham, date from the 19th century onwards and were drawn from the archives of the Montréal-based CIDHCA.

The historic and vintage images document the day-to-day lives of people from a number of islands throughout the Caribbean including Haiti, Jamaica, Cuba, Trinidad and Tobago, Guadeloupe, and Dominica. Integral to this exhibition was an experimental interactive audience research that explored contemporary meanings to these rarely seen images from the past by members of various Caribbean diaspora communities. The exhibition was interested in how these archival photographs function as glimpses of the past that circulate in current space and time.

Letterform[s] 3

Letterform[s] 3 was a pop-up exhibition of 3D artwork produced by students from the Department of Design and Computation Arts class DART 331 - Words in Space. As the class instructor and curator of this exhibition, Pata Macedo noted in her text that accompanied this exhibition that the students involved in this project “developed an awareness and understanding of the design of letterforms by observing and recording them in a context of public lettering.”

Boundless Dialogues
April 3 – 30, 2018
Curators Melinda Reinhart, senior librarian emeritus
Others Organized by Bonnie Baxter, Jenny Lin, Stephanie Rius, and Patrick Visentin, from the Print Media Program
Artists Shazia Ahmad, Mauricio Aristizabal, Alejandro A. Barbosa, Nix Borou, Lindsey Carter, Caristion Fawcett, Jacques Fournier, Pierre de Montalte, Frédéric Lamontagne, and Alix Roederer-Morin
Vernissage April 26, 2018
This exhibition was centered on the intersection of artists’ books by master bookbinder Jacques Fournier with those of studio arts students who responded to his work. In the dialogues that emerged, the bookworks variously spoke to the unconventional structures and materials or evocative stories that push boundaries of the traditional book format inherent to Fournier’s artists’ books.
Curated by Melinda Reinhart, senior librarian emeritus, this exhibition was a culmination of a six-month project initiated by print media professors Bonnie Baxter, Jenny Lin, Stephanie Rius, and Patrick Visentin who worked in collaboration with Jacques Fournier and mentored students throughout the project.

ANTIQUE MAPS RESTORATION PROJECT
In 2018, Concordia Library’s special collections archivist, Alexandra Mills, worked in close collaboration with professional conservator Séverine Chevalier to restore Concordia’s antique maps collection. This important restoration work is generously funded by the Library’s donors.

The restoration project included the 10 oldest maps in Concordia Library’s Special Collections, dating from the 16th and 17th centuries.

Each of Chevalier’s restoration projects begins with a reference photograph and condition report, in which she outlines the necessary treatments for restoration.

The project goal is to stabilize the entire collection to make it more accessible for study and appreciation.

Concordia’s collection includes about 200 antique maps. Most are representations of North America — Upper and Lower Canada, the Saint Lawrence River, the East Coast — and many are coloured by hand, making them unique.

CONCORDIA UNIVERSITY PRESS
Concordia University Press launched in October 2016. During the 2017–18 year, much work was done to put critical infrastructure and staffing into place, establish and promote the Press’s editorial identity, develop relationships with authors, and build the Press’s first catalogue.

In June 2017 the Press exhibited at the Congress of the Humanities and Social Sciences at Ryerson University in Toronto. Shortly thereafter, in September, it established its first series, “Media Before 1800.” Continuing its ongoing support for the Press, the Birks Family Foundation gave a gift of $250,000 to support the Press and its work in October. In January 2018, Meredith Carruthers joined the Press as editorial and production coordinator. Over the course of the year the Press engaged in outreach at Ryerson, York, and University of Toronto, as well as at the 2017 Universes Art Association of Canada conference in Banff. The Press is currently in the process of creating its fall 2019 catalogue.
LIBRARY SERVICES FUND

In 2009, undergraduate students voted to contribute $1 per credit in support of the “Library Project” for a period of 10 years. Beginning in January 2010, the Library Services Fund was created, and a committee was established to manage the fund. The Library Services Fund provides students with carefully conceived collections, resources, and services to inspire academic success. These offerings are over and above standard university libraries’ services, and many are unique in the province’s university network.

In the spring of 2017, the Concordia Student Union held a referendum to renew the agreement between undergraduate students and the Library to enable students to continue to benefit from these collections, resources, and services for years to come. Students overwhelmingly voted yes to renew the agreement, guaranteeing the continuity of services such as 24-hour access to library spaces, textbooks and course packs for all undergraduate courses available, a laptop and tablet loan service, improvements to study spaces and library services for undergraduate students at Grey Nuns, Webster, and Vanier Libraries, and more.
